

Andrew originally trained in Chemistry and Industrial Economics at the University of Nottingham in the UK. From there he progressed into the banking industry specializing in pricing, risk management and trading of financial options and derivatives. He spent a number of years in Singapore and Hong Kong, before deciding to return to University to pursue his passion for the environment. He is studying a Masters in Forestry at UBC, specializing in financial analysis of carbon sequestration and biodiversity conservation.