

Georgia is a PhD student in the Sociology Department at the University of British Columbia. She holds a BSc in Ecology from the University of Otago (New Zealand), and a Masters in Environmental Management from the University of Queensland (Australia). Prior to joining UBC, Georgia worked in biodiversity and climate policy for the State Government of Victoria (Australia) for four years, and as a researcher at the University of Brighton (UK) on an EU-funded sustainable development indicator project for two years. Georgia's doctoral research focuses on the social determinants of climate change action within organizations.

